

We can tell that it's not fair that the bear used all the fields.

Purpose?

What can we tell from the story so far that might help us determine the author's

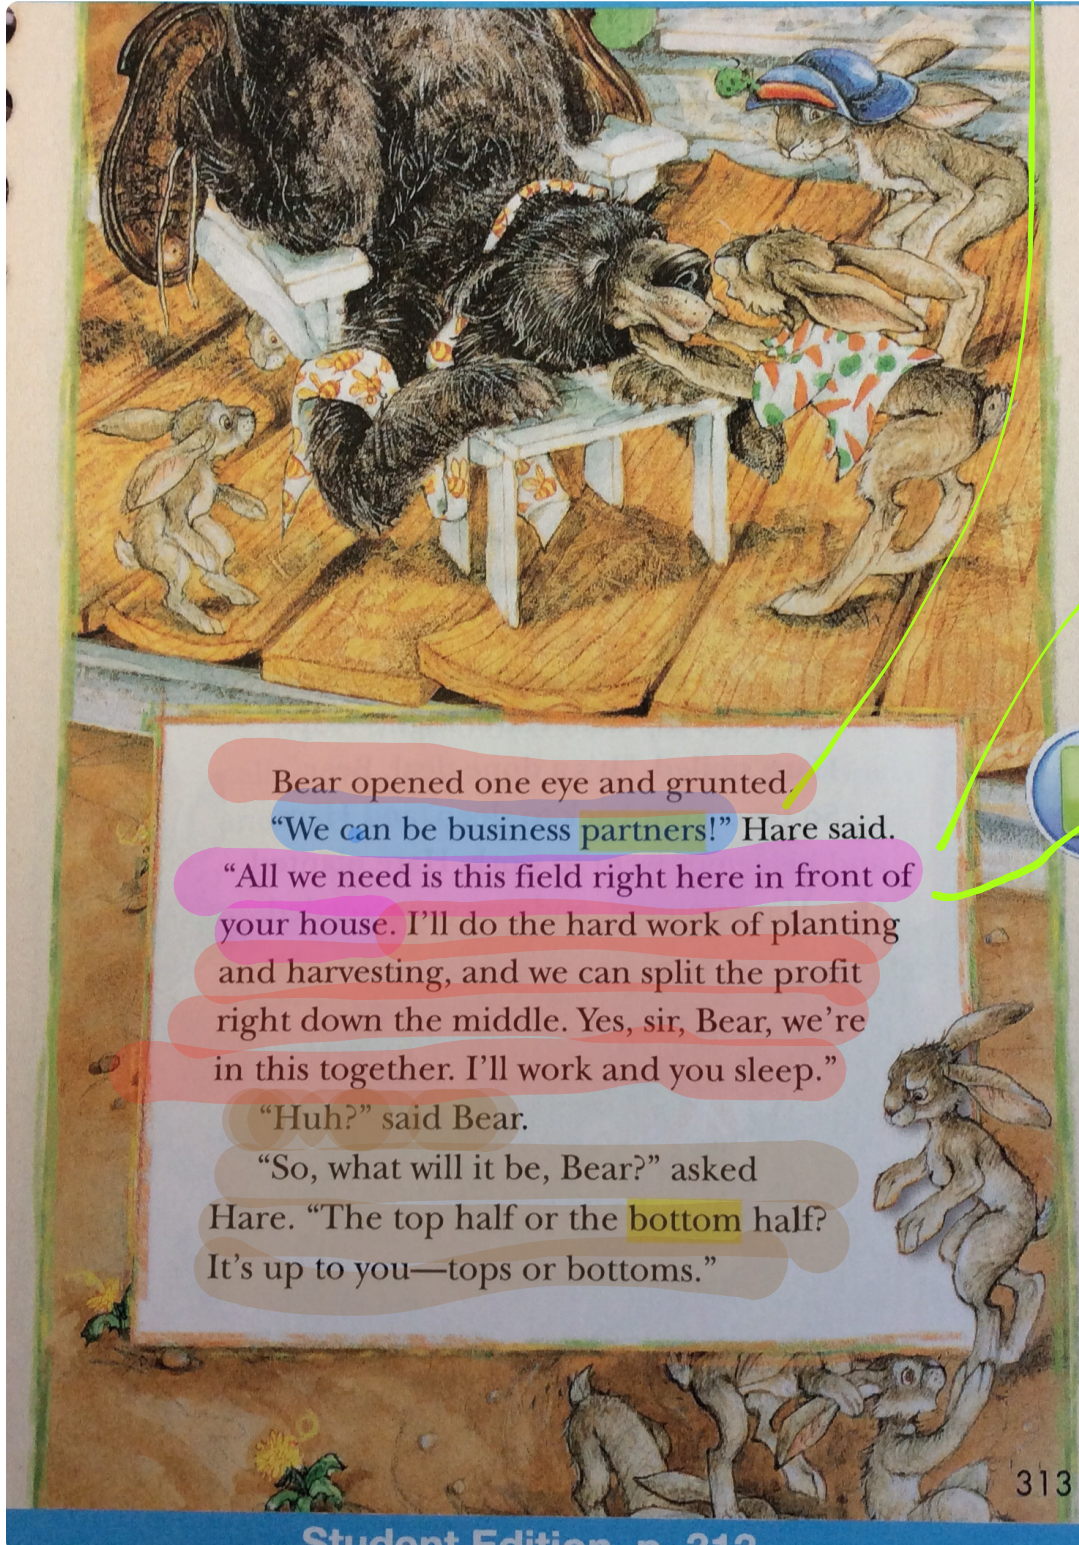

“The children are so hungry, Father Hare! We must think of something!” Mrs. Hare cried one day. So Hare and Mrs. Hare put their heads together and cooked up a plan. The next day Hare hopped down the road to Bear’s house. Bear, of course, was asleep. “Hello, Bear, wake up! It’s your neighbor, Hare, and I have an idea!”

One detail is that we can be business partners. Another detail is all we need is the field right in front of your house. Our last detail is I will work and you can sleep.

Do you think fair solutions may be part of the author's purpose? What information from the text supports your answer?

Bear opened one eye and grunted.

"We can be business partners!" Hare said.

"All we need is this field right here in front of your house. I'll do the hard work of planting and harvesting, and we can split the profit right down the middle. Yes, sir, Bear, we're in this together. I'll work and you sleep."

"Huh?" said Bear.

"So, what will it be, Bear?" asked Hare. "The top half or the bottom half? It's up to you—tops or bottoms."

Describe the animals' agreement on pg. 313. Is it fair?

No it is not fair because bear gets to sleep and hare gets to do all the work.
